The exhibition will be dated back to the 1900s and provide a recollection of activities by the Chinese settlers such as Traders, Chinese Coolies, Ma Jie (domestic servants) and Samsui Women in the early days at Chinatown. The walkway will also highlight the chronological development of KAPT from an open space stage to the current fully air-conditioned theatre. Chinese opera had been a source of popular public entertainment in Singapore since the early colonial period. This

				declined from the 1950s to 1960s. The KAPT that opened in 1969 gave a boost to the revival of the local Chinese opera scene. The Kreta Ayer Heritage Gallery will display the rich intangible cultural heritage of the Chinese through exhibits donated or loaned from the community to showcase the Traditional Arts & Culture such as Chinese Opera, Chinese Puppetry, Nanyin Music, Chinese Calligraphy and Painting and Tea Appreciation Arts. This exhibition will be launched on 14-Jul-19, as part of the Singapore Bicentennial Commemoration, and will be on-going for a year. The committee aims to inspire our children and youths, in particular, to explore and appreciate our local heritage, arts and culture; and to engage visitors to appreciate the unique heritage of our neighbourhood by reconnecting with these stories.
